Another Lent Begins

Shannon Moore

Our Ash Wednesday service includes a hymn that has been modified a bit for the occasion. The first line of the hymn says "Come and find the quiet center as another Lent begins." As we sang those words last Wednesday night in Cuppett Hall, I thought, "How can another Lent be beginning already?" I quite literally have not put away all the church Christmas decorations (so...don't look in the storage room!).

But as the stark service continued, I was able to stop thinking about how quickly time passes and concentrate on finding the quiet center of what Lent is all about—simplicity, penitence, connecting to God.

Each year as I impose the ashes upon the foreheads and hands of you good people, I get a little emotional. To look into the eyes of people I love and to say aloud the words "from dust you were made, and to dust you shall return" is hard. It reminds me that there will come a time when we will be apart from each other.

BUT.

The most amazing thing about being a follower of Jesus Christ is that we have the gift of hope. Even in the darkest times of our lives, when death takes our loved ones, or sickness ravages our bodies, or sadness prevails upon us, we know deep down that in the fullness of time, all will be well.

Because Christ came, we have the hope of resurrection and new life. Because Christ came, we are never abandoned. Because Christ came, we can let go of fear.

As another Lent begins, I pray you will actively look for ways to connect with God AND take some time each day to be quiet and let God connect with you.
